Chief VanValey is a native of Renton, a graduate of Lindbergh High School and a member of the Renton Police Department since 1998. He was promoted to sergeant in 2008, commander in 2012 and deputy chief in 2013. He was deployed for 18 months from 2003-2005 to the Middle East as a captain in the United States Army in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom and retired in September 2016 as a major in the Washington National Guard.

“I am very fortunate to have been raised in this great city and am honored to be Renton’s police chief,” said VanValey. “It will be a privilege to lead the finest law enforcement agency in the area.”

Chief VanValey graduated from Central Washington University with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Law and Justice. He was commissioned as second lieutenant in the Army National Guard.

He replaces Kevin Milosevich who retired after 33 years with the department, including more than 12 years as chief.
